DETENTION OF MAILS.

WE referred, in our Thursday's paper, to the circumstance of letters, put on board the Peruvian, in China, having been found in that vessel after she was wrecked, although she had been upwards of five weeks in Sydney, where the letters ought to have been delivered.

Yesterday we published a letter from Messrs. THACKER and Co., of which the following is an extract:—

We beg to state that we believe the letters you allude to did not compose part of any public mail, but were entrusted privately to Captain Pitkethly, in China, for transmission to the officers of H.M. ships Castor and North Star. Many months prior to the Peruvian's arrival in Sydney, the North Star had sailed for England. The Castor, on the other hand, was so long over due, that it was considered she was not coming down here at all, but had been detained by the Admiral in China, on other service. Under these circumstances it was quite natural that Captain Pitkethly, who was then about to go back to China, should decide on returning the letters personally to the parties from whom he had received them; and it was no doubt for this purpose that those found on board this ill-fated vessel were retained by him in his possession.

When the Peruvian arrived, the captain made a declaration that he had on board only two letters, which he had delivered at the Post Office. This was on the 14th January, and the Peruvian remained in port until the 26th February. After she had been wrecked, six or seven letters, addressed to the officers of H.M.S. Castor, North Star, and Hazard, are discovered, several of which bear the London and Calcutta postmarks, and they are nearly all endorsed as from the "Admiralty," or "the Commander-in-Chief." Why these letters were not delivered at the port with the others, or how Captain PITKETHLY (whose character we are aware stood very high) could state he had delivered all his letters while these remained on board, are questions that will probably never be answered. But the reasons assigned by Messrs. THACKER and Co., cannot be correct: for instead of the North Star having sailed for England before the Peruvian arrived, she arrived from Auckland February 10th, and sailed for England February 25th, thus being in port with the Peruvian upwards of a fortnight, and yet two Admiralty letters, which might have contained instructions of importance, were not delivered. Such conduct appears to us quite unaccountable.

DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE.

CITY COUNCIL.

FRIDAY, 29TH AUGUST.

PRESENT: The Mayor; Aldermen Wilshire, Broughton, and Thurlow; Councillors Hyndes, Sillitoe, Iredale, Henderson, Neale, Smidmore, Ryan, Hill, and Cowlishaw.

ADDRESS TO THE GOVERNOR.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read by the Town Clerk,

The MAYOR proceeded to read the requisition under which the meeting had been called—for the purpose of preparing an address to His Excellency the Governor.

Leave of absence was granted to Alderman Allen, upon the application of Mr. HILL.

Mr. SILLITOE moved that a Committee, to consist of the Mayor, Aldermen Wilshire, Broughton, and Thurlow, and Councillors Hyndes, Cowlishaw, Josephson, and Sillitoe, be appointed, for the purpose of preparing an address of congratulation to His Excellency the Governor on his arrival in the colony.

Alderman THURLOW seconded the motion, which was carried without discussion, except an expression of regret from Mr. HILL, that the City Council should be "at the heel of the hunt" in coming forward to address the Governor after he had been addressed by almost every other public body in the colony.

Alderman BROUGHTON moved an adjournment until 2 o'clock P.M., for the purpose of affording time for the preparation of the Address by the Committee.

Mr. HENDERSON seconded the motion, which was carried.

CLAIM FOR COMPENSATION.

The MAYOR said that he had received a letter, which he should like the members to hear read before the Council broke up.

The letter alluded to was then read by the Town Clerk, and appeared to be from Mr. Martin, the attorney, claiming compensation on the behalf of Mr. Nicodemus Dunn, for injuries received by him, by the upsetting of his gig, in consequence of its coming in contact with a heap of stones left in the street by a servant of the Corporation, and threatening legal proceedings if the claim was not at once complied with.

The MAYOR stated that he would direct an enquiry upon the matter to be made immediately, and would put the Council in possession of the necessary information at the re-assembling.

At two o'clock, the Council having re-assembled, the City Surveyor was called in, and stated that a new building was erecting in Prince-street, and rubbish was cast upon the street. A workman had been employed for about a fortnight previously in deepening the water channel, and placed a small heap of stones about three feet from the kerb stone, and it was over this that the accident occurred. It was thought that the matter was one for the consideration of the police, and it was resolved that the Town Clerk should reply to Mr. Dunn's solicitor, and at the next meeting of the Council, to be held on the 5th of October, the matter would be brought under consideration of the Council.

The MAYOR then brought up the Report of the Committee appointed to prepare an Address to His Excellency, which was read by the Town Clerk.

The following was the Address:

"To His Excellency Sir Charles Fitz Roy, Knight, Companion of the Royal Hanoverian Guelphic Order, Captain General and Governor-in-Chief of the Territory of New South Wales and its Dependencies, and Vice Admiral of the same.

"We, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Councillors of the city of Sydney, in Council assembled, beg leave to approach Your Excellency with sincere congratulations on your safe arrival in this colony.

"We desire to express our devoted loyalty, fidelity, and attachment to our Most Gracious Sovereign, and our gratification that Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to commit the administration of this important dependency of her Crown to your Excellency, who, we are happy to learn, has already shown a disposition to reconcile with your duty to Her Majesty a just appreciation of the rights of those whose welfare has been committed to your charge.

"It will be our duty on an early occasion to bring under the notice of Your Excellency circumstances connected with the incorporation of this city, and with the revenues and expenditure of the Corporation, with a view to solicit further aid from the General Government to carry out the important public works connected with the improvement and welfare of the city."

Mr. SILLITOE apologised to the Council for having initiated this proceeding, and regretted it had been so long delayed, and had not been undertaken by a person of more influence in the Council than himself. He felt that he was performing a duty in asking the Council thus to approach His Excellency, to congratulate him on having been appointed by Her Majesty to the Government of the colony. He trusted the Address would open the way to a satisfactory intercourse between the Governor and the Council, and that the disposition which His Excellency had manifested in other colonies would beneficially influence the administration of his Government in this; that he would be prepared to grant to the Corporation such a fair share of assistance as would enable it to carry out the great works for which it was designed. For his own part he would have rather dispensed with the last paragraph of the Address, and have confined it to a simple expression of congratulation on his Excellency's arrival, but as it had been agreed to in committee, he should move that it be adopted by the Council.

Mr. JOSEPHSON seconded the motion, and expressed his entire concurrence in the Address, particularly in that portion of it which intimated to his Excellency that there were matters connected with the incorporation of the city which the Council would have to bring under his consideration.

Alderman THURLOW had voted against the last paragraph of the Address in the Committee, and he must express his opinion that it would have been better had the Address only gone to congratulate His Excellency on his arrival. He did regret too that this had not been done earlier, although he still hoped it would be received as graciously as they wished. He did not think the Address on such an occasion should have had any connection with business, although in deference to the majority in Committee he should not move any amendment upon it. The Address would have seemed more cordial, more sincere, if it had been made unconditional, if it had not informed His Excellency they had demands to make, concessions to ask. It looked like an offer to shake hands with His Excellency, provided he would attend to the last paragraph. The peculiar wording of the Address—"that it would be the duty of the Council to bring under the notice of His Excellency circumstances connected with the incorporation of the city," was such that it opened up the whole question of the Corporation Act, from the time it was passed to the present period. It was evident from these words that the incorporation the City had was not such as had been desired—that the views of his late Excellency on the municipal government of the City were not correct, or else that their views were not in accordance with his acts. True, this last was his own opinion, and he should be glad to see the City obtain what in justice it was entitled to, but it was not the time to press their claim. His Excellency could not mistake the object of the last paragraph—which was plainly an application for aid, and although he would have to return an immediate answer, he could not yet have informed himself at all of the position in which the Corporation stood. The Legislative Council had forborne to press his Excellency on important questions, until he should have gained information respecting them, and they would do well to follow the example. He should not move an amendment—the Address hinted very plainly at much that he thought the citizens had a right to complain of, and if his Excellency chose to receive it graciously, it certainly was not for him to oppose it.

Alderman BROUGHTON thought, as representatives of the City of Sydney, while they approached his Excellency with congratulations, they would have been forgetful of their duty had they lost sight of the interest of their constituents. The Legislative Council was not sitting at the time of his Excellency's arrival, and therefore could neither have postponed or brought forward the consideration of any question. With regard to the opening up the discussion as to the Act of Incorporation, it was a notorious fact that with its present endowment the citizens were not satisfied with the Corporation; that the Act was not such as they desired, or as was suited to their position. He thought the concluding clause of the petition was very necessary and very proper, and it did not, as the Alderman for Gipps Ward seemed to infer, ask Sir Charles Fitz Roy for anything, but was merely intended to prepare his mind for having the whole subject brought before it.

Mr. COWLISHAW could not but feel surprised at the course pursued by the Alderman for Gipps Ward. He had cut an entirely different colouring on the address from that it was intended to bear. The address asked for nothing—it only intimated to His Excellency that the Act was not such as was desired, and that an early opportunity would be taken of bringing the subject before him. And what would his Excellency's answer be, beyond that when it was brought before him he would take it into consideration. He quite agreed in the address; he did think they should go a little into their wants and sentiments, and not present a mere namby-pamby address of congratulation, which would leave the Governor as much in the dark as to the Corporation of the city as he was before he landed. There was nothing unusual in asking for concessions in an address, and no address had been presented to his Excellency in which the interests of the institution from which in emanated were lost sight of.

Mr. FISHER supported the address, which was then put and carried unanimously.

It was then decided that the Mayor should learn when it might be convenient to his Excellency to receive the address, of which notice would be given to the Council, who would then assemble (his Worship hoped in full costume) and proceed with him to present the address. The Council then adjourned.

LIVERPOOL.

THE following is a copy of an address to his Excellency Sir C. A. Fitz Roy, presented to him yesterday, by a deputation from Liverpool, consisting of William Bowman, Esq., M.C.; Messrs. Holt, J.P., Hoskins, and Sadleir, R.N.:

To his Excellency Sir Charles Augustus Fitz Roy, Knight, Captain General and Governor-in-Chief of the Territory of New South Wales and its Dependencies, &c., &c., &c.

We, the undersigned, clergy, magistrates, landed proprietors, and residents in the town and district of Liverpool, beg most respectfully to tender to your Excellency, on assuming the government of this colony, our sincere congratulations on your safe arrival on our shores, and take this early opportunity of expressing to you, as her Majesty's representative, our undiminished respect for her Majesty's person, and unalterable attachment to that constitution, which, as British subjects we venerate and feel it our duty ever to uphold.

The selection of your Excellency, already experienced in the duties of Government, to fill the high office of Governor-in-Chief of this important colony and its dependencies, we cannot but consider as a proof of her Majesty's desire to promote our interests, and advance our prosperity, and therefore beg to assure your Excellency that we highly appreciate the favour conferred upon us.

Trusting that your Excellency may find it convenient to visit our town and district as soon as the pressing duties which must now occupy your attention will allow, and that thus an early opportunity may be afforded us of expressing more fully our sentiments to your Excellency in person.

We most respectfully subscribe ourselves,

Your Excellency's obedient and dutiful servants.

[Here follow the signatures.]

To the Clergy, Magistrates, Landed Proprietors, and Residents of the Town and District of Liverpool.

Gentlemen,—I thank you for your congratulation on my safe arrival, and mark with satisfaction your expressions of respect to the person of Her Most Gracious Majesty, and attachment to the principles of the British constitution.

It is my intention, as soon as I can spare time, after the Sessions of the Legislative Council has been closed, to make a tour through different parts of this colony and its dependencies; and you may rely upon my paying the town and district of Liverpool an early visit.

CHARLES A. FITZ ROY.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CASE OF THE MARGARET WHALER.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—Public journals are frequently made the medium of misrepresentation to serve some private end, or excuse the errors of passion or prejudice, and assuming the semblance of public virtue, which, if allowed to go unexplained and uncontradicted, pass for truth, and excite public sympathy.

Having read the letter of Mr. Stuart A. Donaldson, which appeared in your paper of the 26th instant, in reference to the above ship, I feel called upon to reply to some portion of it, and put the public in possession of the true state of the case; I therefore request you will insert this my answer. The facts are as follow:—

The seaman, Henry Sheppeck, applied to me professionally, and stated that Mr. Courtenay, the master of the said ship, had promised him his discharge, but refused paying him any wages, and requested me to apply for the amount due to him for upwards of four years' services on board that ship, stating at the same time that he was labouring under indisposition, and had no means to support himself. This man seemed to be labouring under great depression of spirits, and I advised him to again call on Mr. Courtenay, and request his discharge in the usual way at the Police Office, which he might receive without prejudice to his claim for wages or lay. Sheppeck subsequently informed me that Mr. Courtenay refused to give him any answer whatever to his application, only desiring him to go about his business. I then, at the instance of Sheppeck, addressed the following letter to Mr. Courtenay:

23rd June, 1846.

Dear Sir,

I am informed by Henry Sheppeck, one of your seamen, that you agreed some days back to discharge him in this port, arising from his state of health. He has authorised me to arrange with you as to the amount of lay due to him, if I am rightly informed your ships' articles are illegal. I am, however, not disposed to embarrass you by any legal proceedings, if any amicable adjustment could be effected, although I have all documents prepared for the purpose of enforcing my client's claim.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN RYAN BRENAN.

To Captain E. Courtenay,
Ship Margaret.

To this I received no answer, and in two or three days after addressed a further letter to Captain Courtenay, informing him of my intention to apply to the Bench of Magistrates on behalf of Sheppeck. To this also I received no reply, and accordingly filed the usual information before a magistrate to enforce the payment of the wages, which he reduced to the sum of £20, to bring it under the jurisdiction of that Court.

Prior to the hearing of this case I had two or three interviews with Captain Courtenay upon the subject, on all of which I offered to settle the matter, and withdraw the case, on his entering into an account with Sheppeck, who admitted the whole of his slop bill, amounting to forty-four pounds odd, which was the whole amount the Captain claimed credit for, and Sheppeck was entitled to the one hundred and sixty-fifth lay, which, at the lowest calculation, would leave, after paying all expenses, and the above credit, a balance of between £30 and £40 in his favour. Suffice it to say, that the case was dismissed at the Police Office, the magistrate intimating that the Vice Admiralty Court was the most proper tribunal to take the case to.

After the case was thus disposed of, this poor seaman again came to my office, labouring under great excitement, and complaining bitterly of the conduct of the captain towards him, who had actually employed a man in his stead, and that he was without money and the power to obtain employment for want of a legal discharge, and knew not what to do, and that he did not then feel himself well enough to go to sea, and requested me to write to the captain or Mr. Donaldson, proposing to take his discharge, giving up all claims on the ship or cargo, upon being paid sufficient to relieve him from my costs—which were, up to this period, £5 5s.—I accordingly wrote the letter headed "without prejudice," which Mr. Donaldson has thought fit to publish, and which I consider a breach of good faith, as much so as if the word private were thereon written.

Subsequent to this letter I had several interviews with the captain and Mr. Donaldson, when I informed them that Sheppeck had instructed me to take the case into the Vice Admiralty Court, and repeatedly urged the seaman's right to his discharge, and at least that small sum out of his wages or lay, and that I was very unwilling to arrest the ship and involve the owners under any circumstances, in a considerable loss: pointing out at the same time, to Mr. Donaldson the illegality of the ship's articles, when I was met by Mr. Donaldson proposing to bet fifty pounds that I could not sustain the case of my client in the Vice Admiralty Court, that he represented a rich owner, and that he would fight the case to the last. Notwithstanding all this, I again and again offered an arrangement upon the above terms, but I was put in defiance. I at length arrested the ship, but it is not the fact, as stated in Mr. Donaldson's letter, "that I caused my client to swear that he had a claim on the ship to the extent of one hundred pounds." On the contrary, he only swore to the sum of TWENTY-ONE POUNDS,—and it is necessary to make oath of a certain amount being due to institute proceedings in the Vice Admiralty Court,—which sum of twenty-one pounds was much less than appeared to be due by the account as stated by Captain Courtenay.*

Now, a word as to the ship's articles, which I successfully contended in the Vice Admiralty Court, were void, and fraudulent in law. First, they were void under the statute 5th and 6th William IV., which they recited, and professed to be made in accordance therewith, because there was no definite period fixed for their termination. That they were fraudulent, because there were irreconcilable and inconsistent conditions contained therein, as for instance: "And neither of the crew shall demand or be entitled to his share or wages after mentioned until the arrival of the said ship at London, and her cargo shall be there discharged and sold, and the money for the same actually received by the owner." Then comes the following covenant and condition:—"And the owner is hereby authorised to sell and dispose of the cargo to be obtained during the said voyage, or any part or parts thereof, at any time or times, and for any price or prices, and upon such terms or conditions as he shall think fit, and either upon credit or otherwise, and at any time either before or after the arrival of the said ship at London, and by such sale or sales the crew shall be bound."

By this clause it is obvious that the owner might sell at any port or ports he pleased, any part or parts, or the whole cargo, from time to time, without ever allowing the ship to reach London, being the only place where payment was to be made to the crew for their share, so that in fact the ship might be kept on a continuous whaling voyage, at the will and pleasure of the owner, without the possibility, under the articles, to sustain any action either at law or in the Vice Admiralty Court, if validity were given to such a fraudulent contract.

There are several other irreconcilable and inconsistent conditions, which I do not deem it necessary to particularly set forth, as I am fully satisfied that the foregoing extracts are in themselves sufficient to convince any man of common sense that the seamen ought not to be bound by, or deprived of, his lawful and hard earnings under such an instrument.

Now, as to ten other seamen of the same ship who applied to me professionally, I both personally, and by letter, requested Captain Courtenay and Mr. Donaldson to come to some arrangement with the men, rather than subject the ship to be arrested by so many parties, which would involve a very great expense; that I was authorised by the men to make such an arrangement as I thought best for their interests, and in an interview with Mr. Donaldson I expressed my desire to avoid such a proceeding, and proposed giving credit for all sums paid or advanced by the captain to the men on his own showing; that my clients were instructed by me to remain on board and perform all duty required of them, notwithstanding any proceedings that I might take in their behalf, which they did until turned out of the ship in the manner hereafter mentioned: but this proposition was met in the same terms of defiance as all my previous amicable suggestions. Still, being desirous not to incur unnecessary expense, I included five seamen's names in one arrest, and abstained from arresting for the remaining five, still hoping that Mr. Donaldson would see the propriety as well as the expediency of an amicable arrangement.

I find the following words in reference to this arrest in the letter of Mr. Donaldson: "These unprincipled, but simple men, incited thereto by some evil disposed person, conspired to attack the Captain, and arranged their matters in this way." This certainly is very ambiguous, as to whom Mr. Donaldson refers. If he intended it to apply to me, I wish he had the manliness and firmness to put it in terms such as I could not misunderstand; I then would know my course; but I cannot grapple with insinuations or fictions. Now, I know of no person who has incited these, as he is pleased to call them, evil disposed men, my clients. They are yet all in Sydney, and will, I have no doubt, to a man admit that I have done every thing to appease their anger, and to induce them to consent to a reasonable and amicable settlement of their claim against the ship.

No doubt several abortive steps have been taken in defence to my proceedings in the Vice Admiralty Court, but I feel in justice bound to the Judge of that Court to notice a very great error and mis-statement in Mr. Donaldson's letter. It runs as follows:—"But far different was his fate (Captain Courtenay's) for, as in the former case the plea was rejected, so in this case it was admitted to proof." Now, how stands the fact? The articles were rejected, and not admitted to proof for the reasons before stated in the case of Sheppeck; and the articles were not admitted to proof in the case of the second arrest, nor was there any day fixed for their admission; on the contrary, the Judge of the Vice Admiralty Court said, that when they came before him regularly to be admitted to proof, he would then—and not till then—decide whether he would admit them to proof or not; and that at least a week would be required to complete such proceedings; the Judge of the Court thereupon declined ordering the withdrawal of the arrest until the usual and necessary proceedings were adopted for that purpose.

After this defeat, I again proposed to Mr. Donaldson immediately relieving the ship from arrest in all the cases upon the men's receiving an order for the amount of their respective shares, payable in London, guarding, however, against any charge being made to them for a substitute for them during the remainder of the voyage, or for law expenses, which offer I had before repeatedly made without effect.

There is one other fact worthy of notice—these men, it is said, deserted the ship, which is not the fact, and if they had, why did not this active ship agent, this would be legislator, this law adviser, and this ne plus ultra of perfection, Mr. Donoldson, have the men brought before the Police Bench and punished for such desertion? Oh! no, he well knew his articles would not hold water—that the Police Magistrate in the case of Sheppeck pronounced them not in accordance with the Act, and that he therefore would decline acting under them.

On the morning of the second arrest the Captain called the five men aft the ship, and in the terms of the warrant of arrest called them the late seamen of the ship Margaret, and told them that he would not allow them to remain any longer on board, nor provide them with any more provisions, ordering the men at the same time over the side of the ship.

Five others, as I am informed, were ordered by the Captain to be deprived of their rations for absence from the ship, while they were in fact at my office, and the police office, seeking their discharge and a settlement of their wages; these last ten men on informing me of this occurrence I ordered to return to the ship, and offer to remain on board and do all duty required of them, which they informed me they did, but were refused admittance on board, being told by the chief officer that it was by the Captain's orders.

Under the foregoing circumstances, I am at a loss to know how Mr. Donaldson will justify himself with his employer, the owner of the ship, for incurring such heavy law expense, loss by detention, &c., &c., and going on blindfoldedly, without seeing that he ultimately would be compelled to do that which I so repeatedly urged upon him—an amicable arrangement with the men; but notwithstanding his sympathy for these unprincipled but simple men, he has endeavoured to delude the public, and particularly the mercantile community, as to the state of the facts and the law of the Vice-Admiralty Court, into an opinion that the law of that Court is absurd and unjust, and that the ship's articles, in his legal view, were like himself, all justice and perfection, when in fact, from the short recital I have given you from these articles, they are a mass of contradictions, incongruities, and inconsistencies too absurd, and too unjust towards the unfortunate seamen, to be upheld.

Lastly, as to the writ of prohibition granted by Mr. Justice Therry, in the case Sheppeck, which, by-the-by, was only a prohibition to take effect until the first day of next term, when the opinion of the full Court should be heard. It is worthy of notice, that one of the grounds upon which Mr. Justice Therry granted this temporary prohibition was, that although the Judge of the Vice Admiralty Court was to judge of the nature of such plea as might be submitted for proof, yet that such Judge had no right, in his Honor's opinion, to look into any deed or articles with a view of admitting or rejecting them upon the ground of their validity or fraudulency; which appears a most preposterous doctrine, if the Judge of the Vice Admiralty Court is competent to admit or reject such pleas as may be offered to proof.

Your obedient servant,

J. RYAN BRENAN.

* From the continual state of excitement and poverty in which this poor man, Sheppeck, was kept by the obstinacy of the captain and agent, in not paying him his wages, or granting him his discharge, he, in a fit of despair, cut his throat, and only by the best surgical assistance was at length restored to health, having been removed to the Infirmary immediately after the circumstance being discovered.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—Being a plaintiff in a case tried in the Court of Requests this day, and having occasion to leave the Court for a few minutes, during which time my case was decided as follows,—viz.: That defendant shall pay £1 per month until the debt be liquidated; and as the amount of the debt exceeds £12, and consequently more than twelve months' time is allowed to the defendant for the payment of this claim, a period which the Commissioner, I believe, is not authorised to give, according to the provisions of the Court of Requests Act; and my solicitor having acceded to this illegal arrangement in my absence, without my consent, and having refused to point out to the Commissioner the illegality of this decision, when subsequently requested to do so, I have thus ventured to intrude myself upon your notice, in the hope that either you or some one of your correspondents will be pleased to acquaint me what steps ought to be taken in such circumstances, as the defendant has expressed his intention of becoming insolvent or leaving the colony in a short time.

JUSTITIA.

August 27.

[The solicitor having consented, it cannot be said that the decision of the Commissioner is illegal; and the plaintiff is precluded from taking any other steps.—EDS.]

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND.

PRESBYTERIAN MEETING AT HOBART TOWN.

(Abridged from the Launceston Examiner.)

A PUBLIC meeting was held at Hobart Town, in St. Andrew's Church, to deliberate on certain passages in the charge recently published by the Lord Bishop of Tasmania to his clergy offensive to the members of the Presbyterian Church, and in regard to the establishment in the colony of Van Diemen's Land of a Consistorial Court, and consequently of the ecclesiastical laws of England. The attendance was very numerous, and included many gentlemen of the highest influence and respectability.

The Rev. Mr. Lillie was called to the chair, and opened the business of the meeting, by stating that it was not his intention to anticipate the sentiments of any of the speakers, and he only regretted on the ground of personal feeling the necessity which had led to the present meeting. He trusted the proceedings would be conducted in the spirit of Christian charity, so as to evince, that whilst they were ready to assert their lawful rights as British subjects, and members of the Presbyterian Church, they did so as Christian men, impelled by the anxiety to preserve their most valued rights and privileges. The Reverend Gentlemen then offered up a prayer to Almighty God, and read the advertisement convening the meeting.

THOMAS YOUNG, Esq., then moved the first resolution:—

That the publication of the charge of the Bishop of Tasmania to his clergy, which has taken place since he left the colony for England, for the purpose, as herein declared, of obtaining the introduction of ecclesiastical laws into this British colony, makes it imperative at this meeting of the Presbyterian inhabitants of Van Diemen's Land, whose constitutional rights would be invaded by the introduction of such laws, to assert their rights and privileges secured to them by the act of union of Great Britain.—Resolved, therefore, that neither the established Church of England, nor any of the ecclesiastical laws of England, nor any power to put these laws in force (excepting those only having reference to civil rights, which have been delegated to the supreme civil courts of the territory) can by law be introduced into this British colony except in direct violation of the rights of the Scottish Presbyterian inhabitants, secured to them by the said Act of Union; and that her Majesty's Letters Patent, purporting to erect a diocese in this British colony, are repugnant to the said Act of Union, and therefore void in law.

The propositions contained in the resolution were perhaps of rather a startling character; but he felt confident of being able to demonstrate their truth, and to do this it was in the first place necessary to refer to such portion of the Bishop's charge as relates to the establishment of a Consistorial Court, and the powers on which he relied to enable him to do so. He claimed this power "as one of the inalienable privileges of a Bishop;" but said that the defects of the colonial law prevented him from exercising such power, although it was given to him in express terms in the letters patent constituting the colony an Episcopal see. The language thus used by the Bishop assumed that the Ecclesiastical laws of England exist in the colony, and this assumption was based on a mere inference drawn from his letters patent. The essential facts contained in the resolution were—that neither the Ecclesiastical laws of England, nor any power to put these laws in force are in existence. Mr. Young then quoted extracts from Sergeant Stephen's "New Commentaries on the Laws of England," to prove that independently of the Act of Union between England and Scotland, the Ecclesiastical laws of England had not application there. The Queen had no authority to confer on the Bishop, or any other individual, by letters patent, the right to establish a Consistorial Court in Van Diemen's Land, to be governed by the Ecclesiastical laws of England. He meant no disrespect to the Queen in thus repudiating the power attempted to be conferred on the Bishop. But a still stronger barrier against the assumption of the power to establish a Consistorial Court, to be governed by the ecclesiastical laws of Britain under letters patent was to be found in an article of the Act of Union of Great Britain. It was there expressly enacted in language as plain and strong as as could be used, that the Church of England, and all the privileges conferred upon it were limited to the kingdoms of England and Ireland, the dominions of Wales, and towns of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the territories thereunto belonging, and in like manner the Church of Scotland was declared to be the established Church within the Kingdom of Scotland. And the 4th article of the said Act conferred equal rights and privileges upon the natives of each kingdom, and the British plantations "from and after the Union." It was quite plain from the reading of the Act that there were two established Churches recognised by the law of England, and if one of these Churches with its ecclesiastical laws could be transplated to a British colony, so could the other with its laws; but that either could be so transplanted was clearly hostile to the spirit of the Act of Union. The fourth section of the Act was as follows:—

That all the subjects of the United Kingdom of Great Britain shall, from and after the union, have full freedom and intercourse of trade and navigation to and from any port and place within the said United Kingdom, and the dominions and plantations thereunto belonging; and that there be a communication of all other rights, privileges, and advantages, which do or may belong to the subjects of either kingdom, except where it is otherwise expressly agreed in those articles.

He submitted it could bear no other construction than an equal participation in all rights stipulated to be secured by the Act to the inhabitants of each country. Mr. Young then went into an elaborate examination of the provisions of the Act, quoting Mr. Stephen and Blackstone in support of the construction he put upon it, and also reading the opinions of the twelve Judges on the question propounded to them by the House of Lords, on the 30th April, 1840, regarding Canadian Clergy Reserves Act. That Act expressly stated, that the words "Protestant Clergy" did, in reference to the Act of Union, include the clergy of the Church of Scotland. He commented severely on the powers pretended to be given in the letters patent, and of the danger they would incur, in admitting those powers. In concluding a very lengthy, able, and argumentative speech, Mr. Young said, I am still free to admit, that I think the episcopal clergy should not be left without some authority to keep good order in their community. The general body of the people is interested in this. This can be easily done. And the same necessity must exist with respect to the Presbyterian establishment in the colony. But whatever modified measure may be adopted for this purpose, respect should be had to the rights and privileges of the other Christian denominations in this colony. Gentlemen, I will not detain you longer, further than to express my sincere conviction that I have established to your satisfaction the truth of the important principles propounded in the resolution which I have had the honour to submit for your consideration. To my mind the attempt to fix upon this colony the ecclesiastical laws of the Church of England is a most impudent attempt to rob us of those hard-fought-for rights and privileges which were secured to us by the Act of Union of Great Britain. If you agree with me in this, then I have no doubt that there is not a Scottish Presbyterian who now hears me, who will not do all in his power to vindicate these rights, and thus establish that the same blood flows through his veins with the noble men who in former times suffered so much from a dominant prelatical priesthood, and, after much persecution and bloodshed, secured these rights for their posterity, by the Act of Union of Great Britain.

Walter A. Bethune, Esq., seconded the motion, which, on being put from the chair was carried unanimously.

Mr. James Thomson, in a speech in which he indignantly repudiated the insinuation cast by Dr. Nixon on the Presbyterian Church, moved

That the Bishop of Tasmania in his Charge uses the following language as regards certain measures with reference to the Episcopal Church in the colony:—"In these shifting days, the Secretary of State may be a Romanist, a Presbyterian, an Unitarian, a Dissenter—nay, even an Unbeliever; for these are not the times when the State feels it a duty to watch with jealous care over the high principles of Christian truth as exhibited in the Church of England, or when soundness in the 'faith once delivered to the Saints is likely to be regarded as a necessary qualification for a Minister of State." Resolved, that this passage, in which Presbyterians are associated in one indiscriminate and offensive charge, with Romanists, Unitarians, and Unbelievers, in which it is avowed that, for the sovereign to appoint a Presbyterian to an office of dignity and influence, would compromise the high principles of Christian truth as exhibited in the Church of England, and the "soundness in the faith once delivered to the Saints," is an unprovoked indignity, which calls for public vindication, and justifies the Presbyterian inhabitants of this colony in taking measures to prevent its recurrence.

Andrew Crombie, Esq., seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Dr. Turnbull moved—

That while this meeting considers it incumbent on Presbyterians thus publicly to vindicate their character from an indignity publicly cast upon it, it is deeply sensible of the importance of doing so in the spirit of that Christian charity, which being first pure and then peaceable, combines a paramount regard for the interests of truth and justice, with the subordinate feelings of forbearance and good will.

Robert Barr, Esq., seconded the resolution, which was carried.

Dr. Officer moved that a petition to her Majesty, based on the foregoing resolutions, be adopted, which having been assented to,

The fifth resolution was moved by Joseph Dixon, Esq., seconded by John Robertson, Esq., and carried unanimously—

That Mr. James Thompson be convener, and that the following gentlemen be a committee to take charge of this petition, and they are hereby requested to transmit the same to her Majesty through his Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor, and at the same time to transmit printed copies of the same to the committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, earnestly soliciting their aid in protecting the petitioners in the enjoyment of their just and equal rights with their brethren of the Anglican Church.

John Walker, Esq., moved the sixth resolution in the following form—

Resolved, that a subscription be entered into to defray the expenses consequent on the said petition.

This was seconded by William Gunn, Esq., and carried unanimously; after which, the meeting separated.
